TAFT AND CABINET IN CHARGE AT YALE

Stimson Directs Alumni in Gay Costumes at Their Class

NEW HAVEN, June 17 -- Ex-President Taft and his former Cabinet had virtual charge of affairs here to-day, as it was alumni day on the commencement programme. Although Prof. Taft was celebrating late last night with about thirty of his classmates of '78, he was around early this morning to take charge of the meeting of seniors and graduates for Commissioner Bingham sent him up to honors at Battell Chapel.

This meeting was under auspices of the honorary societies of Phi Beta Kappa and Sigma Xi, and it was hardly over before Henry L. Stimson, '88, ex-President Taft's Secretary of War, took charge of the general alumni meeting. At both meetings alumni in their gay reunion costumes cheered the speakers selected to represent the classes back for reunions. Many of the reunion classes gathered during the morning on the steps of Osborn Hall, where the historic old fence used to stand, and had their pictures taken. Current topics of national interest were Current topics of national interest were displayed on placards, the class of 1912 being particularly proud of its record as the first one year reunion class. Thirteen marriages of the class were announced from a huge placard carried by three class boys and two class girls as the result of a year out of college, bringing, as the class statistician put it, the average of marriage at 327. A second placard carried by this enterprissecond placard carried by this enterpris-ing class read: "Why Girls Leave Home— 1912 Has Graduated."

Taft for Competition.

Prof. Taft, who presided at the Pni Beta Kappa meeting, was enthusiastically cheered as he gave a brief introduction to each speaker. He said the subject that naturally suggested itself in connection with a meeting of this kind was scholarship and he made a strong plea for competition in scholarship as well as in athletics in a university supposed to promote scholarship and to rank preparation for public speaking with scholarship.

The other speakers were Austen Bryant Reeve of Chicago, a senior in Sheff and
